Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

TODAY the United States begins the registration of 26 million business and industrial workers under the federal Social Security Act. This week employers are being required to file the total number of employees, and other data, with the government; and later this month detailed information will be obtained from each individual worker. So much has been said about old-age pensions that the Social Security Act is apt to be confused with the blanket pension payments now being met jointly by state and federal governments—but the Social Security Act is something else. It is a joint employer-employee insurance program, under management of the federal government, by which a certain part of earnings is set aside to provide for retirement when the employee becomes old, or for benefit payments if he happens to become unemployed before then. The difference between blanket old-age pensions and this business-industrial program is that this program is financed out of personal income, and its benefits are in direct ratio to the amount of the individual's income.

Insurgents Gather for Final Effort to Storm Capital

Battle on Manzaneros River Fiercest of the 11-Day Siege

AT THE CITY EDGE

Meanwhile, New Trouble Blows Up Between Germany, Russia

MADRID, Spain—(AP)—Violent fighting raged Monday for control of the crossing of the Manzaneros river and Frenchmen's bridge, as the insurgent troops struggled to gain a foothold in University City.

University City itself was under the heaviest fire of the siege, now in its 11th day.

The civilian population on the fringes of University City was evacuated as shells dropped into the side streets, smashing house-fronts and pavements.

It was apparent that the insurgents were developing a strong attack for positions at the edge of Madrid itself.

German Protest to Soviet

MOSCOW, Russia—(AP)—The German government protested sharply to Soviet Russia Monday against the arrest of 23 German citizens.

The protest followed a Soviet announcement to the German government that charges of espionage and conspiracy had been lodged against 14 of those arrested.

The accusations against the other nine German had not been disclosed.

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(Special)—Since business has picked up so the streets in most cities are so crowded it's hard to tell when its Saturday, and with this and that company announcing pay hikes for workers and Christmas bonuses to boot, a lot of us get nervous every-time the boss comes around. Why right here in Memphis things are going so well street moochers are beginning to be insulting if you offer them less than 15 cents, and store people have to hire folks to give away samples.

It begins to look like the G-men will have to change their names if they ever work up any more trade as most all the public enemies seem to have gone to jail or winter quarters.

Farm Land Rises to 8-Year Record

Farm Credit Chief Reports Record Prices for Farms Today

COLUMBUS, Ohio—(AP)—The demand for farm land is at the highest level in eight years as the result of rising agricultural commodity prices, and loans have increased accordingly, Governor W. I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration told the 70th annual meeting of the National Grange here Monday.

State Monopoly Partly Successful

Liquor Dispensary Plan Works Sometimes, Fails Others

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Institute of Public Administration, announcing the results of a two-year study of post-prohibition problems over the week-end, said only a few of the 15 state liquor monopoly systems were "measuring up to expectations in serving the particular needs of their states."

The Institute of Public Administration is a research agency in the field of government and public administration affiliated with Columbia University.

The report added:

"We are convinced that the best of the state monopolies have in them greater potentialities for curbing the evils arising from the use of liquor than have the best of the private license systems."

"The cardinal requirements for successful administration of a state liquor system," the report went on, "are that it be administered by men who are free from political or commercial influences; that in the jurisdictions where the sale of liquor by the package and by the drink, is permitted, the restrictions be in keeping with the views of a majority of the citizens; and that among both administrators and legislators the aim of getting profits be definitely subordinated to that of promoting temperance and the general welfare."

Hope's Employers Get Blanks; Must Report Employees

Business House Must Show Total of Workers, Though One

REACH 26 MILLION

First Form, SS-4, Employers Only; Must Be Filed by Saturday

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The federal government Monday began the most gigantic task of its kind ever undertaken—the job of setting up social security accounts for some 26 million workers.

From 45,000 postoffices throughout the country postmen set out with forms to be delivered to 5 million business establishments.

Thus began the unprecedented operation of collecting basic data for the old-age pension system applying to workers in factories, shops, mines, mills, offices, stores, and other such business establishments.

Forms Delivered Here

Form SS-4, for employers only, was delivered to business establishments throughout Hope Monday morning, as scheduled in an announcement Friday by Hope Postmaster Robert M. Wilson.

Form SS-4 is simply a card requiring the filling in of the name of the business establishment, its address, the approximate number of persons employed, and the nature of the business. It must be filed by Saturday, November 21.

Although certain other parts of the Social Security Act apply only to employers of eight or more persons, Form SS-4 must be filled in by every business house, even though it employs but one person.

Urges U. S. to Handle It

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A recommendation that the administration of the social security program be taken over completely by the federal government, with the states making financial contributions only, was made Monday to the United States Conference of Mayors by its president, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York City.

Hope Is Abandoned for Two Entombed

Shifting Mud Creates Desperate Situation in Mine Tunnel

SUPERIOR, Mont.—(AP)—Shifting mud hampered rescue crews and caused virtual abandonment of hope Monday for two miners trapped since Saturday night in a tunnel of the Wundfall placer mine near here.

The miners, Antoine Gustafson, 40, and Oscar Gebart, 45, were trapped in a narrow horizontal shaft they were boring into a snow-covered mountain side.

Ouachita College Building Destroyed

Conservatory Building Burns Sunday With Loss of $40,000

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—The three-story brick building housing the Conservatory of Fine Arts, the R. O. T. C. offices and several student rooms at Ouachita College, burned Sunday causing a loss of perhaps $40,000. There was about $20,000 insurance.

The blaze was discovered shortly before 3 p. m. It started in the attic on the north side. Boys who roomed on the second floor spread the alarm to the boys' dormitory nearby, and most of the students' belongings were saved. However, Sammie Roberts of Boardman, James Bates of Pine Bluff and Jesse Reed of Duman lost practically all of their clothing and Reed lost a new radio. One member of the college band lost a saxophone.

The building was erected in 1896 during the administration of the late Dr. John W. Conger, at a cost of $35,000.

Many college boys entered the building to save the belongings of the students rooming on the second floor. The

A Novelization of the Twentieth Century-Fox Moving Picture Starring the Dionne Quintuplets, With Jean Hersholt, Rochelle Hudson, Helen Vinson, Slim Summerville, Robert Kent, and Dorothy Peterson. Based on the Story by Bruce Gould.

NOTE: The story beginning here is Adela Rogers St. Johns' novelization of the Twentieth Century-Fox film, "Reunion," second starring vehicle for the Dionne quintuplets. Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Peterson, Rochelle Hudson, Robert Kent, Helen Vinson, and Slim Summerville play the parts of the leading characters in the story. Illustrations are taken from the film. All characters, names, and incidents in the film are entirely fictitious.—Editor.

Chapter 1

They had an awful time selling Dr. John Luke the idea of the famous reunion that was to change so many lives.

Of course he had had a bad two days leading up to the moment when it was first suggested to him.

There was Rusty, who was in more trouble than usual.

There was Nurse Kennedy, trying to persuade him that when his nephew Tony came back from the hospital in Toronto, a fulfilled doctor, he—Dr. John Luke—should retire.

On top of that, there was Constable Ogden, who had become obsessed with the idea that his wife, Jenny, was going to beat the quintuplets who had made Dr. James Luke famous—that Jenny in fact was going to produce sextuplets for him almost any minute.

Dr. Luke went back then to help the nurses with their wriggling charge s. It was like trying to get five puppies back into their baskets all at once. Yoy always missed one.

"Pink Eye" Victim Should Use Own Towel and Keep Hands Clean

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

A tissue which lines the eyelids and runs out onto the eyeball is called the conjunctiva. Inflammation of this tissue is known as conjunctivitis. Various types of germs may attack the eye and cause this kind of inflammation.

When the conjunctiva becomes inflamed, there is a formation of pus, and the eyelids burn, smart, and turn red. This infection may spread to the eyeball. The eye, when inflamed, usually becomes exceedingly sensitive to light, and tears flood it constantly.

In the morning the eyelids will be found crusted together. Doctors treat this condition according to the type of germ that causes the inflammation, and to the severity of the infection.

Pink eye is a common type of conjunctivitis. Shortly after this special type of germ gets into the eyes, they become reddened. The lids are swollen and puffy, and usually are glued together in the morning. Pink eye ordinarily is spread by the use of a common towel by a sick family.

If the eyelids itch and smart, if they feel hot and heavy as though sand were underneath, the condition is probably conjunctivitis. Most patients get rid of this ailment within a week, provided proper attention is given to the eyes.

Occasionally symptoms are produced by over-exposure to ultraviolet rays, to the electric arc used in welding, or to the arc lights employed in motion picture studios. The two last-named are also forms of the ultra-

Message to Gold Star Mothers—Former Battlefields Are Peaceful Resting Places for War Heroes

PARIS.—I believe it is the duty of anyone who has been to France and visited the battle country, and seen some of the beautiful cemeteries where so many of our soldiers lie, to carry a message to the parents and friends of these young men who did not come back.

We did not get as far as Verdun, I am sorry to say, but we followed the Marne through Meaux to the famous sector including Chateau Thierry and Belleau Woods. And if I had my chance of laying a loved one away, it would be right where these heroes rest. Never, by any stretch of the imagination could one picture a more perfect or peaceful scene. Our own Battlefields Commission, with the co-operation of the French, has been inspired to erect memorials, and the more personal monuments to each boy, that will remain in my memory far more sharply and impressively, than all the time-honored cathedrals and galleries of the old world put together.

One of the Hill 204, among all hills were, for their elevation on military maps, we stood at sunset and looked down into the lovely town of Chateau Thierry. The Memorial, a huge temple of four square columns stands at the top of the hill. I shall not try to describe it, but rather my impressions as we gazed speechless with emotion into the valley below. All about, the fields were still green.

I thought instantly of the Twenty Third Psalm. The quiet waters by, the quiet waters of the sweet Marne were near. The green pastures were again green. The war might never have been. But there is war, only too true. My husband, beside me, had seen it under the guns. He was less affected than I. His memories were too grim, no doubt, to waste time

Trials and Tribulations of Thespians: Run in Ruby Keeler's Hose Supplies Only Responsible From Exhausting Routine's of "Foot-Handies"

HOLLYWOOD.—All over the lot: Ruby Keeler and a flock of chorus girls are doing the "Handies-With-Your-Feet" number for the new musical, "Ready, Willing, and Able." Short, chubby, Bobby Connelly is directing, aided by a husky gent named Jesse Hibbs. Mr. Hibbs was an All-to look best in long, sheer black hose. These cost $18 a pair, but develop runs and have to be changed two or three times daily.

She leads the chorus through an exhausting routine of footdances. They imitate Chaplin's walk, Sonia Henie's skating, a fat man slipping on a banana peel, a wobbling drunk, a tight-rope walker. When Connelly calls "Cut!" the dancers sprawl all over the place from weariness.

An old-timer, visiting the set, points out several of the girls as veterans of the Fox Movietone Folies back in 1929. Which upsets a statement by Dave Gould, another dance director, that the active life of a chorine averages only three years.

Connelly calls for another take, and the girls rise. But Miss Keeler exclaims, "Hold everything! I'm bustled out again!" So everyone gratefully waits while the star dons another $18 worth of stockings.

Trying Love Scenes
These are trying days for Claudette Colbert. Her brain concussion, incurred in an auto accident, seems to have aggravated the sinus trouble from which she has suffered for years. Back on the set of "Maid of Salem," she looks wan and tired. She is playing a love scene with Fred MacMur-ray. He holds her in his arms and pours out tender words. The camera stops and a maid brings Miss Colbert an emetic. She sprays her nostrils and steps back into the arms of the actor. This goes on all day.

Hard Going
Josephine Hutchinson is bruised and exhausted from days of work in "Mountain Justice" (officially based on the Edith Maxwell case) in which she receives a brutal beating at the hands of her father (Robert Barrat) and eventually kills him.

On this day there have been 16 rehearsals of a trying scene in which Miss Hutchinson, Elizabeth Riedon, and Marcia Mae Jones struggle with Barrat for possession of a knife. Finally word comes that the scene will be filmed.

The players take a truck in their frayed nerves and go into action again. Just before the finish the cameraman

It is in a fog—a mineral oil fog which permeates every corner of the big prison yard set. Henry Fonda is being photographed in the sequences in which he kills a priest and escapes.

It is an eerie illusion, watching Fonda standing there menacingly holding a gun while William Gargan, the priest, walks toward him. Director Fritz Lang peers through the swirling fog as the camera grinds. Something is wrong. He yells "Cut!" and comes from behind the camera.

"Oh, no, you don't!" exclaims Fonda. He points the gun at Lang and fires. It's a blank, of course, but the director jumps and the monologue drops from his eye. Then he laughs. Everyone else laughs. Hollywood likes practical jokes.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Newspapering in a Silver Boom Town.

Wells Drury was an innocent of 20 or thereabout when he landed in reporting in Virginia City, Nev., in the early 1870s to work as a reporter for the Gold Hiss Evening News.

His editor told him he would be paid $2.50 a day "whisky money" over and above his regular wage, showed him a vicious six-shooter with which the editorial staff resorted with indignation readers who were forever popping in, and sent him out to gather news.

Before breakfast the young cub had covered a murder. He had chicken for breakfast and found a $5 gold nugget in the cave. Before the day was over he covered two fatal accidents in a silver mine, the runaway of a stage coach—on which job he picked up a hunk of gold-bearing quartz worth $14—and a dog fight.

Besides, he got back to the office in time to fire the editorial six-shooter at a bad man who came in to criticize recent news story.

Life, in other words, was somewhat eventful for a newspaperman in the heyday of the Nevada silver boom; and a gaudy account of such a career is found in "An Editor on the Comstock Lode," by the above-mentioned Mr. Drury Farrar & Inghart; $30.

Mr. Drury has written a breezy and deeply entertaining story of life on the Comstock Lode. The famous old characters of the west, good and bad, are in this book, and so is the rowdy, devil-may-care spirit of those days.

All in all, "An Editor on the Comstock Lode" is a lot of good reading—and it's enough to make a weary reporter of this modern age lament that he was born 50 years too late.

The Motorist's Prayer

Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye,
That no man shall be hurt when I pass by.
Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of thine.
Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear
me company,
From the evils of fire and all calamity.
Teach me to use my car for others' need,
Not miss through love of speed
The beauties of thy world; that thus I may
With joy and courtesy go on my way.

—Selected—
The above poem was sent to me last week, and on reading the enormous fatalities caused from automobile accidents over the week end, this seemed to me a fitting time to pass it on.

Mr. and Mrs. M. LaGrone had as week end guests, their daughter, Mrs. Surrey Gilliam and grandchildren Margery Ann and Robert of El Dorado.

The Future Homemakers club of the Hope High School met in the Home Ec. cottage Tuesday evening, November 10, with their sponsor, Miss Sara Stroud. The occasion was to in-duce new members into the club. The ceremony for the 30 new members was very impressive. The girls dressed in white took the obligation from the president, Miss Martha Ann Singleton. On the altar there were four candles, representing friendship, service to community and improvement of club. Other officers are Miss Carlene Bruner, vice president; Marie Kent, secretary; Duleia Dee Compton, treasurer and Evelyn Briant, parliamentarian.

Mr. and Mrs. Duval Perkins and little daughter, Nancy Lane of Warren were week end guests of Misses Marie and Nannie Perkins.

Miss Mary Billingsley was a Saturday visitor in Texarkana.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Casey had as week end guests their niece, Miss Edney Ruth Watts of Texarkana and as Sunday guest, Mrs. C. Guidici also of Texarkana.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sharp and little son, Percy III, of Mooringsport, La., were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hearne.

Miss Mary Carrigan left Monday morning for Dallas, Texas, where she will join Judge Alf Carrigan and family for a few days at the Texas centennial.

Mrs. Glenn Williams has returned from a few days visit with relatives in Warren and Little Rock.

Mrs. R. M. Patterson, Mrs. J. W. Patterson and Miss Helen Hunter were Monday visitors in Little Rock.

Mrs. Pat Rising and little daughter, Katherine have returned to their home in Texarkana after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. A. M. McLarty.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Besty of Beuna Vista, Ark., were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Jones and family. Mrs. Besty will be remembered as Miss Fay Jones.

A most interesting meeting of the Friday Music club was held on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. M. Houston, North Pine street with Mrs. Wilbur Jones as joint hostess. Following the regular choral practice, conducted by Mrs. John Wellborn, choral director, the study hour was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. C. Carlton. During a short business period, the club decided to further consider the establishment of a scholarship fund, to be announced in the next meeting. Miss Joy O'Neil, program chairman, gave a most informative discussion of "Ancient Music," illustrating her talk with pictures of ancient musical instruments. Miss Harriet Story gave a vocal selection, "A Hindoo Summer Song," followed by a piano number, "Song of India," by Mrs. Wilbur Jones. Miss Joy O'Neil sang the "Bedouin Love Song," and Mrs. C. C. McNeill played a "Chinese Dance." The program closed with a vocal selection, "Feast Of The Lanterns" by Miss Mary Louise Keith. Twenty-four members responded to the roll call.

Solves 'Home vs. Career' Issue

gineer of the line, intervened, the women attacked him and, it is charged, ripped off part of his clothing.

The remainder of the crew, except two negro brakemen, fled the train. The negroes were benton.

The same night, railroad officials claim, a section foreman was attacked and severely beaten near Waskom, Texas. The following night the Waskom station operator, they assert, was attacked by three men and a woman, unidentified.

About the same time a railroad bridge was burned at Jonesville, La., and on October 26 another span was fired near Destrehan, October 22 a passenger train of the Louisiana & Arkansas line was fired upon in the train yards at Alexandria, La., but no one was wounded. Three nights later a group of women attacked and severely beat a fireman on this run.

Guard Is Slain
Violence flared again on November 3, when a second New Orleans-bound passenger train was ambushed near Winnfield and a special guard, Max Osborne, riding on the engine cab, was shot and killed.

The fireman was badly injured and officials said the engineer's neck was grazed by a bullet. Strike-breaking crews now operate the lines.

Nearly a week later, November 9, the head-on collision of two Louisiana & Arkansas freight trains near Grant, La., brought death to four more trainmen. In this wreck died H. G. Hunter, engineer; C. C. Steelman, fireman; S. W. Wright, guard, and Prentiss Frazier, brakeman.

Women Again Attack

Railroad officials attributed the wreck to failure of Hunter to observe a stop order to clear the road for another train. Strikers attributed the accident to "inefficiency of the strike-breaking trainmen."

The next day, November 10, women strike sympathizers again are alleged to have entered the picture, beating and tearing clothing from a Louisiana & Arkansas engine crew in the Minden La., yards.

At this juncture Gov. Richard W. Leche called in railroad officials and union representatives for new arbitration efforts.

But even as mediation efforts were resumed, two of the riot's freight Three trainmen were slightly injured in one derailment and W. N. Adams, vice president of the L. & A., charged that "vandals" caused both derailments.

Other derailments have occurred in recent weeks, some resulting in serious damage, but with no injuries. Railroad officials described them as "normal wrecks." Strikers charged, however, that they were caused by "inefficient crews."

But even as Louisiana, Texas, and Arkansas, states through which the railroad runs, have refused railway guards permission to carry firearms.

This was the first major fire at Ouachita in more than 40 years.

College officials said the burned building would be replaced as soon as possible. Temporary quarters for the conservatory will be established, it was said.

With morning . . . came the repair crews

An early snow, drifting down from leaden December skies, froze to telephone poles and lines. Hard on its heels came the wind. Ice-laden wires snapped and poles splintered before the blast.

Night found scores of towns throughout the storm region handicapped by crippled telephone service.

But, with the morning, came the repair crews. Hastily gathered from regions untouched by storm, they poured into the stricken area with trucks, tools and materials. Day and night they rushed the work of reconstruction.

One advantage of the Bell System's far-flung organization is this: When disaster flattens the telephone system, men and money and materials are instantly available for the prompt repair of the damage.

Mary MacKenzie was waiting for Dr. John when he entered his office that morning. He looked at her with pleasure. Dr. John knew that the bright color in her cheeks was natural and he knew that her strong, slim body was tireless in the service of him and his people. She had been his office nurse for four years, so that there was little about her he didn't know.

A warm, safe glow filled Dr. Luke's heart when he thought of her as Tony's wife. Make a fine wife for a doctor, would Mary MacKenzie. She'd understand all the trials and problems of a country doctor's life and it would be a fine thing to come home to her. Because he loved his nephew better than anything on earth—except perhaps the quins—he was glad that Tony had chosen Mary, glad that when Tony came home they would be married.

Mary was repairing the face of a boy, a red-headed boy who obviously had just emerged from a scrap.

fashionable surgeon, rather than return to the ceaseless labor and varied practice of a country town.

The little cloud that had been on Mary's face had transferred itself to Dr. Luke's own weatherbeaten countenance when he entered the barred and guarded gate of the quins' hospital. Nurse Kennedy noted it immediately. Nurse Kennedy always noted everything about Dr. John Luke. For almost 40 years they had worked side by side, those two, and Dr. Luke said often enough that without her he couldn't have raised the blessed little girls whom the whole world had come to love.

It was a pretty place, the dwelling of the quintuplets. And it was a miracle of efficiency and modern science as well. Nurse Kennedy knew more about that than anyone else and she knew, too, how great a man was the doctor who had made it all come true. Her heart was very tender as she watched him come up the walk, as she noted the tired droop to his shoulders.

But all she said was, "You need a vacation."

"I don't either," said Dr. Luke testily. "Anything new?"

Her voice was triumphant. "Annette has cut her bicuspid!"

"Only Annette?" said Dr. Luke.

She nodded. Dr. Luke fished in his pocket, produced a dime and handed it to her. "You win," he said. "I thought sure Yvonne would cut hers first."

He stopped to wash his hands carefully and Nurse Kennedy handed him a clean towel. Together they went to the nursery door, opened it and then stood silent, shoulder to shoulder, looking in. Their faces were intent, uplifted.

The nursery was bright and gay and shining. There were five small beds, exactly alike. Five very small beds in woolly nightgowns, as much alike as the beds, knelt beside them. They looked a little like the small Botticelli angels as they knelt. The words of Our Lord's Prayer, softly spoken, in French, came from the nurse who knelt beside them. The little voices whispered and stumbled after her.

Annette peeped up, patting her little hands together, her small voice caught a word or two—"Que votre nom soit sanctifié."

Emilie lifted her dark eyes toward the ceiling, as the voice went gently on, "Que votre regne arrive." Cecile watched her and then with a smile of triumph made a very crooked sign of the cross.

The doctor's eyes were wet as he watched them. He wanted happiness and goodness for them more than anything else in the world. The fame and the money weren't so important; if they grew up to be strong, tender women. In his heart, he joined in their prayer. "Lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil." And somehow he thought of Tony.

For a few minutes after that, he romped with them. They were radiant, their five little faces alive with delight. Nurse Kennedy thought, they love him better than anyone, better than those of us who are with them, all day long.

Annette showed him the new bicuspid with pride. Cecile hid herself under the covers in a wild game of hide-and-go-seek and then popped out calling, "Icill, icill." He found Marie sound asleep with her feet on the pillow and turned her gently around.

Then he went to Emilie and said sternly, "Emilie, Nurse Kennedy tells me that you get out of bed 10 times in the night. Beds are to sleep in. You are to stay in your bed, comprenez?"

"Oui," said Emilie.

"And you'll remember?" said Dr. Luke.

"Non," said Emilie.

He roared with laughter, said his good-bys, started out. As soon as his back was turned Emilie started to get out of bed. She wasn't sleepy. As usual she wanted to go places and do things. The other three—Marie was still asleep—watched her. They all stood watching her, Dr. Luke, Nurse Kennedy, the French nurses. When the nurse picked her up and put her back to the other three imitated her and started climbing out of bed. Marie woke up and joined in.

Dr. Luke went back then to help the nurses with their wriggling charges. It was like trying to get five puppies back into their baskets all at once. You always missed one. And then he went out laughing.

It was outside the gate that he encountered Constable Ogden.

Constable Ogden was talking to a gypsy fortune teller. His face was flooded with excitement. He seemed almost in a trance. Dr. Luke watched him as he crossed the gypsy's palm with silver and she slipped away.

"Dr. Luke," said Ogden impressively, "you've got to pay attention to me. Every sign points to it. You got to be right where I can get you every minute. I tell you Jenny's going to have sextuplets. The gypsy just told me so, too. Every sign points to it. It's the sixteenth day of the sixteenth month of sixth."

Dr. Luke said, "Jim, I've heard about enough of this nonsense. It's ridiculous. Has everybody around here gone crazy? Nobody's satisfied with one baby any more."

"But look doctor," Ogden pleaded. "I know it'll be six. This morning our best hen hatched six of her eggs and—"

"I don't care who hatched what," said Dr. Luke. "Jenny's not going to have sextuplets or whatever you call 'em."

The human mind, he decided as he drove away, was an unexplainable thing. Here was Jim Ogden, a sensible, grown-up man, obsessed with the idea of having six children.

When Dr. Luke arrived at his house he found another strange manifestation awaiting him. Asa Wyatt was the father of his blessed quins, and Asa had apparently been talking to Ogden. Asa looked so downcast that for a moment the doctor had trouble keeping his face straight. He looked like a man who has just been hit hard in the solar plexus.

"Doctor," Asa said, "I want to talk to you about Jim Ogden. I never did Jim Ogden no harm. It doesn't seem neighborly of him, this thing he planning. He says Jenny's going to have six babies today."

Plainly, the idea that his neighbor might beat his own record had him down.

The doctor prepared to get out of his car. "Don't worry, Asa," he said. "Jenny won't have her baby today and it won't be six, unless I don't know what I'm talking about."

He was wrong on one count. For at that moment Jim Ogden appeared beside them. "Come quick, Doctor," he said. "Jenny wants you right now. Are you all ready? Do you understand this is the biggest job you've ever done? Why, the quins won't be in it."

It wasn't sextuplets, however. When the doctor came out of Jenny's room some hours later, he found both Asa Wyatt and Jim Ogden waiting for him.

They were pale and exhausted with suspense, walking the floor. Dr. Luke laid the baby in Ogden's arms. "There she is, Jim."

"Where's the rest of them?" said Jim Ogden. "Are they all girls?"

"That's all there is," said Dr. Luke.

Asa Wyatt gave the disconsolate Constable a gleeful and significant look before he bounded out of the door cheering himself and his still unbroken record.

But the ogien baby all by her single self was to be more important than her disappointed father figured. She was, in fact, to become famous and to have an effect upon the lives of many people. For little Jenny Ogden was the 3000th baby brought into the world by Dr. John Luke, doctor of the quins and the most beloved country doctor in the world. It was from that astounding fact that the Reunion was born.

present heating equipment consider first the gas-fired Floor Furnace

... warm air heating WITHOUT A BASEMENT

With a Floor Furnace installed in your home you can enjoy all the advantages of furnace heat without the necessity of a basement—without any visible evidence of heating appliances in your rooms except the floor level register.

The modern gas-fired Floor Furnace is a miniature, self-contained heating plant that is installed between joists beneath the floor. No room space is taken up; the entire unit is out of sight and safe below the floor.

QUICK FACTS about the Floor Furnace

- Safe • Economical to Operate • Quickly and Easily Installed • No dirt or Fumes • Eliminates Sweating Walls and Windows • Takes up no room space • Vented • Provides plenty of Healthful Heat • Easy to Buy.

Natural Circulation of Air

According to the law of gravity, warm air being lighter rises and cold air, being heavier, seeks the lowest level—in this case the Floor Furnace that is swung below the floor. The cold air is drawn down through the cold air grill, is heated as it passes through the furnace then returns to the room through the warm air grill, circulating throughout the area to be heated. The temperature is controlled to any desired degree—automatically.

Even, Healthful Heat

Combustion takes place in a welded, gas tight fire box—never coming in contact with the warm air traveling through your rooms. The warm air is not depleted of oxygen because air for combustion is taken from under the house. The atmosphere in your rooms never becomes stale or "dead" through lack of ventilation. This eliminates the tendency to colds caused by chilly rooms and poor air circulation. Every nook and corner is heated evenly.

Eliminates "Sweating"

If moisture forms on your windows in extremely cold weather, dripping down on the casement and even on the walls and floor, you can end this annoyance by using Floor Furnace heat. A properly installed vent carries off all the products of combustion, positively eliminating "sweating" walls, windows and furniture. Vents are installed without breaking into your walls and complete installation ordinarily requires less than half a day.

Our convenient terms make it possible for you to enjoy this method of heating while you are paying for it. A small amount down and the balance in easy monthly installments. One of our heating engineers will be glad to advise you on your heating requirements—without obligation.

The Poultry Flock
The annual production of the poultry flock may be influenced by the fall feeding practices. Most poultrymen in Hempstead county prefer the grain and mash system of feeding, finding that flexibility is its chief advantage.

In the grain and mash system of feeding the mash ration is designed so that it may be fed with an equal amount of grain to give a balanced ration to the average hen, says S. A. Moore, extension poultryman, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

ture. However, the ratio of mash to grain must often be changed to meet the requirements of the hens, he explains. Pullets in heavy production are apt to lose weight unless the grain portion of the ration is increased and, after losing weight, production will stop until the weight is regained. This stop in production is often accompanied by a molt, so that months may pass before the birds return to profitable production.

Maintenance demands vary with the season, and as the weather grows colder the grain portion of the ration should be increased, the poultryman points out. No definite rules can be made for feeding rations, and the producer must constantly watch the condition of the birds, increasing the amount of grain when they are losing weight.

Club Work Goal

Hempstead county home demonstration clubs have adopted cultural growth as a goal in club work, and the establishment of club and community libraries is to be an important phase of the program.

Reading bids fair to become a popular leisure time activity among club women throughout the state, according to Miss June Donahue, extension specialist in community activities, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. A self-improvement reading project provides restful recreation for a farm woman. It takes her way from brooms, wash boards, and cooking, and gives her something else to think about. She may travel to the ends of the earth, enjoy a new atmosphere, without ever stirring from her own fireside.

A club or community library can bring excellent books and magazines into rural homes, the specialist points out.

Value of Bread
The protective value of one loaf of bread is worth several plates of hot biscuits in warding off the deficiency disease, pellagra.

Furling results from the lack of vitamin G. The disease usually breaks out in the spring, reaching its peak in June. But this year, partly due to the drought, which cut down the amount of fresh vegetables on the farms, it reached its peak this fall.

Certain common foods are particularly rich in the pellagra preventative vitamin. The best sources of the vitamin are lean beef, chicken liver, buttermilk, collards, fresh peas, turnip greens, and tomato juice, according to Miss Gertrude E. Conant, extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. Yeast is also an excellent source of vitamin G, and the disease is seldom found in families who use it consistently.

Even though these green vegetables are good sources of vitamin G, their protective value may be decreased by the method of cooking. They should be cooked in a small amount of water, and for a short time. The pot liquor should be used. Canned tomatoes are also an extremely good protective food. Miss Conant points out that the vitamin is not destroyed in canning.

Canning budgets in many Hempstead county homes have already provided for a good supply of protective foods, says Miss Bullington.

Arkansas on Top in Southwest Conference

One More Victory Make Them Champ

Win Over Texas Would Give Conference Crown to Porkers

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—The University of Arkansas winds up its 1936 football season against the University of Texas at Little Rock December 5.

And when the Razorbacks defeat the Longhorns from Austin, Arkansas will be champion of the Southwest Conference. Fresh from a 17-0 decision over Southern Methodist University, the Porkers rated Sunday favorites for that final game.

The prospective title-holders are a complete outfit, predominantly native Arkansas material.

Outstanding exception to this rule is Captain Cliff Van Sickle, 22 years old, who at his six feet, four inches and 235 pounds across the border from Morris, Okla. Van Sickle is a senior in the college of education.

Salute Quarterback Jack Robbins, a junior, hails from Little Rock. His claim to fame is based primarily upon forward passes but Saturday he was a No. 1 triple-threat star against SMU.

Sub-Captain Bobbie Martin, comes from Texarkana and is a senior in business administration. Jim Benton, ace end, is from Fordyce and thinks Arky Vaughan, Pittsburgh, Pirate shortstop, the nation's greatest athlete.

Van Brown, fullback, and Billy Hunter, end, are the team's two fathers. Brown is a student in the college of Agriculture.

Raymond Spillers, better known on the campus as "Brush-Hawk," weighs 260 pounds and is a junior in the school of business administration.

Center Ken Lunday transferred to Arkansas from Northeast Oklahoma Junior College.

Relph Rawlins is the "brains" of the team. He makes "Straight A" grades in 16 hours of an arts and science course, letters in track and football.

BLUE MONDAY

The first thing we want to do today is to congratulate Coach C. O. Criswell and his fine DeQueen High School football team.

For team spirit, fight and determination we never saw an equal to that one here last Friday night. You deserved to win and did win. We have no alibis.

It was Friday the 13th. The Leopards were just that superstitious to believe they could come down here and win that Friday the 13th was unlucky for Hope. And then it happened!

It was fine psychology. The only suggestion that we would offer to Coach Criswell would be to change that number on that Mr. Friday's sweater who plays a guard position. Make it number "12" instead of 11. Then you will have a Friday the 13th—a perfect set-up!

Now we will turn the column over to Mr. Gridst, sport editor of the DeQueen Daily Citizen. Here's what he says about the game:

"Doleful alibis about overconfidence and one thing and another issuing from the wailing wall at Hope to the contrary notwithstanding, Gridst is willing to leave it to any unbiased observer of the 12 to 7 victory of the Leopards over the Bobcats at Hope Friday night to testify that the better team won.

"There positively was no luck or fluke about it. Hope had the best of the breaks throughout, and both of DeQueen's touchdowns were well-earned." What if Hope did have a couple of men out because of injuries? The Leopards had three mainstays hurt and taken out during the game, but if they had lost their leading end, even have mentioned that in print as a justification for losing. The Leopards don't alibi when they lose, and they don't like to hear alibis when they win.

"There is only one simple and inescapable explanation, to wit: The Leopards beat their masters. Outweighed some 12 pounds to the man, the Leopards played the Bobcats off their feet, bewildering them with deception, amazing and dazzling them with speed and whipping them down utterly and completely with a fighting ferocity and grim tenacity of purpose such as we have never before witnessed on a football field or anywhere else.

"The Leopards went over there to win, in spite of the odds they knew were against them, and never at any time.

"Back to a moment to the Leopards' Bobcat game. That event, somehow, is on our mind. Nobody at Hope or elsewhere in the state gave the Leopards a remote chance of stopping the ram-paging Bobcats, but, believe it or not, there were many here in DeQueen who had faith that they could and would do that very thing. Certain it is that all of the 250 loyal fans who accompanied them to the Bobcat fair, and who did what they could with cheers and supplications from the sidelines, did not make the trip just to see their Leopards chewed up. We believe in our Leopards and our coaches, and they have justified our faith.

Republican Party Too Numerous

Byron Price Pays Tribute to Personal Quality of F. D. R.

By BYRON PRICE
Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington

Election post-mortems usually are conducted by a natural absence of proof, but in the case of the great Republican carnage of November 3 there certainly is no such obstacle.

In fact it now is plain that the victim was suffering from so many fatal disabilities that the problem is to decide which of them was the principal cause of extinction.

The simplest way is to classify the reasons for the Republican demise under three general headings—the candidates, the issues, and party organization. In every one of these respects, the voters apparently gave the Democrats the best of it. Any one of the three, it appears, might have determined the outcome by itself.

It was not the sort of campaign, for instance, where a finger could be put on any single circumstance or development, and that particular factor identified as the turning point toward Democratic victory.

On the Democratic side there was no spectacular blunder at the opo-sition—in fact surprises of every kind were notably lacking during the entire period of campaigning. On the Republican side, no one particular blunder can be charged with causing the defeat. The only conclusion is that an invincible combination of causes was working steadily to Democratic advantage.

"Prosperity Aids Democrats" Unquestionably, the character and tempo of the candidates influenced the voters.

Mr. Roosevelt's recognized ability on the stump, his agility in taking advantage of every break, his almost uncanny faculty of sensing public sentiment—all these were in his favor. Besides, many who did not agree with his policies liked him for his courage and his record of action, and for his background of experience, particularly in international relationships.
In contrast, Mr. Landon not only failed to capture the popular imagination, as the election returns show, but he manifestly was advised badly in some of his most important utterances. He put up a brave battle, and won wide respect for his devotion to simplicity and directness. But that did not prove sufficient to an electorate accustomed to the glamor and finerie which Mr. Roosevelt had brought to the Presidency.

So far as the second factor was concerned—the issues—the Democrats had to their advantage the most compelling of all.

That was the issue of prosperity.
It is the long and invariable custom of the American electorate to punish administrations which are in power in evil times, and to support those which are in power when times are prosperous or tending toward prosperity. That rule is almost all-powerful, and it did not fail in the November election.

Farley Welds Machines
Finally, in the matter of party organization, the discrepancy was so great as to hardly admit of comparison.

After the debacle of 1932, the Republican managers started with nothing but a hope. They were handicapped by being newcomers on the national scene, hardly on speaking terms with the powerful party leaders in those eastern centers of population which Mr. Landon must carry if he was to be elected. And in the western country which they knew best, their organization lines had been smashed pitifully
by the Roosevelt policies.

Against them was an astute Democratic chairman who had had four years to consolidate the triumphant lines of 1932. He spoke the language of the population centers where votes are concentrated—and skillfully managed. He had done what no chairman ever did before in similar measure—taught the great political machines,
east and west, how to stand together.
Many additional things might be mentioned—patronage, class legislative favors, government spending, and others. But when all is said and done, history must attribute the greatest political victory in more than a century to two principal causes—the personal qualities of Franklin D. Roosevelt and of James A. Farley.

It is estimated that the average yearly rust bill of the United States is $1,000,000,000, an amount equal to the

Roosevelt Elected by No One Faction

He Didn't Need Solid South, the Farm or Laborite Blocs

By the Associated Press
WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt, if he chooses, can laugh at pressure groups, sectional groups, or any other groups presumptuous enough to say, "We did it for you."

He could have been elected without the South's 124 votes. He could have been elected without the South, plus
New York and Pennsylvania, John L.
Lewis and his industrial unionists pledged their estimated million or more votes for Roosevelt. Pre-election forecasts indicated that the labor vote would decide the result in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, and possibly

New York and Indiana. But Roosevelt did not need the 152 votes of those five states.

No combination of farm states can claim credit for his election. The veterans can not. The unemployed can not.

So the president is free from election-group pressure.

Congress Alone Susceptible
Another branch of the government, the supreme court, is free of election pressure. The members can stay for life, or until they voluntarily retire.

The only branch which may be subject to pressure groups, then, is congress. And that situation presents a problem.

Imagine the plight of a member of congress, more particularly, a member of the house. Re-election is necessary every two years. If he is from an industrial area he can not say the voting district representative is independent and say, like Roosevelt, that the whole nation elected him.

From that it appears that the pressure groups, to the vast disgust of many of the electorate, will retain a two-hold of influence in spite of Roosevelt's huge majority.

President Tough Hurdle
But they will still have a tough hurdle in the President. Even if they jostle members of congress into accepting their legislation, it must confront the president, who will not be up in 1938 and can keep them in doubt as to whether he will be up in 1940 for a precedent-shattering third term.

The Presidential backstop, many observers feel, should make for orderly legislation.
If the President desires to exert congressional pressure, however, that can be made very heavy, what will his tremendous popular indorsement. To that pressure, if applied, the congress will have little to say. It can scarcely be doubted that the electorate voted its approval of the Roosevelt way.

Misses Louise and Mary Pilkinton

Friends of Brice Williams of Texarkana were grieved to hear of his sudden death this week. He was a former Washington citizen and widely known throughout the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis of Zion community was in town Monday. Mr.
Lewis attended quorum court and Mrs.
Lewis visited in the home of W. E.
Elmore.

Rev. Robertson left Tuesday for Little Rock where he will attend the annual Methodist conference convening in that city Wednesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank May returned Tuesday morning from the bedside of his father at Delight, who is quite

Foreign Relations Idea
CHICAGO—(AP)—A group of Chicago bankers, professors and other business and professional men started the "Chicago council on foreign relations" a few years ago for exchange of information and viewpoints on developments behind foreign affairs.

The idea spread and now the organization claims a membership of more than 1,500, sends a representative to Europe once a year to observe opinion there brings foreign lecturers here.

Ghost Goes South
ALPINE, Texas—(AP)—Negotiations for establishing a vast international park along the Mexican border revived a famous ghost story.

The proposed park includes the Chisos mountains, among the loftiest in Texas. The work "Chisos" means "ghosts."

The story goes that the chief of a mighty Indian tribe was captured by marauding tribes from across the Rio Grande. He escaped after years of torture and fled to the Chisos but could not find his tribe which had been massacred.

Bones found in a deserted Chiso canyon years later were reputed to be those of the chief. From this grew the legend that the chief still strides the mountains, wailing because he cannot find his people.
